
The Chair of International Economic Policy (Prof. Lassmann) at the University of Mainz is looking to fill the position of a

Doctoral student (75%)

We seek a motivated doctoral student to join our team starting in December or later, but before April 2025. This is a limited contract of 3 years, with the possibility of extension. The salary is following the German public service salary scale (TV-L E13).

Our research team focuses on empirical topics related to international trade, economic geography, urban economics, and international taxation. As a doctoral student, you will be involved in teaching undergraduate courses in either English or German. You will contribute to the Chair's research projects and develop your own research agenda. We offer a research- and policy-oriented, international work environment with extensive opportunities for skill development. The department has a strong focus on international economics. The Chair provides a supportive and flexible work setting to qualify young academics.

The University of Mainz is an equal opportunity employer committed to fostering diversity. We strongly encourage qualified women to apply.

Your Profile:

- A Master's degree in a relevant field with skills in quantitative methods and an excellent academic record
- Degree recognized in Germany
- Research interests in economic geography, regional and urban economics, and international trade
- Proficiency in German is a plus but not required
- High motivation for research and teaching, with the potential for interdisciplinary collaboration

For further information, please see our website <https://international-policy.economics.uni-mainz.de/> and contact me by e-mail: LSLassmann@uni-mainz.de. Applications will be considered starting immediately. Complete applications are welcome until the position is filled. Your application should contain a motivation letter, your CV, a research statement discussing your research interests and how you have employed empirical methods in a seminar or your thesis (1 page maximum), your transcripts (including preliminary transcripts if applicable), and 1 reference letter.
